This study applies the diagnostics proposed in Tonhauser (2012) and Tonhauser et al. (2013) in order to determine the PROJECTIVITY and NON-AT-ISSUENESS of the contents triggered by the adverb ere ‘too’, the demonstrative determiner hori ‘that’, change of state verbs such as utzi ‘stop’ and the reportative evidential omen ‘it is said’ in Basque. Results indicate that while the contents triggered by all four linguistic expressions are not-at-issue, only the first three are projective. This analysis expands on previous research on projective content by exploring a language typologically distinct from Guaraní or English.
